

Space for reflection on development and transformation processes

I offer space for reflection for individuals, and I assist companies in their development and transformation processes.

In my work, I combine solution-focused and systemic practices with principles of linguistic philosophy and aspects of applied ethics. The combination of these perspectives leads to approaches that can be used effectively and practically in the threefold process of developing strategies, structures and culture.

I create environments for reflection, development and transformation processes in such a way that it invites you to strengthen your resources, take personal responsibility, discover new horizons and unlock opportunities for action and new potential.

All the different aspects can be addressed in a variety of settings: in workshops, coaching sessions, discussions, seminars or training sessions, or through assistance with specific processes or as selective support.
